about 1850

We so fully accord with the subjoined 'HINTS FOR TRANSPLANTING,' by the Messrs. Downing, that we copy them entire, and submit them to our readers without any remark of our own, except to recommend that the tops of the trees should be shortened at the time of planting.

HINTS FOR TRANSPLANTING.

I. Many persons plant a tree as they would a post! The novice in planting must consider that a tree is a living, nicely-organized production, as certainly affected by good treatment as an animal. Many an orchard of trees, rudely thrust into the ground, struggles half a dozen years against the adverse condition before it recovers.

II. In planting an orchard, let the ground be made mellow by repeated ploughing. For a tree of moderate size the hole should be dug three feet in diameter, and twelve to twenty inches deep. Turn over the soil several times, and, if not rich, mix thoroughly with it some compost, or well-rotted manure. In every instance, the hole must be large enough to admit all the roots easily, without bending. Shorten and pare smoothly with a knife, any bruised or broken roots. Hold the tree upright, while another person, making the earth fine, gradually distributes it among the roots. Shake the tree gently while this filling is going on. The main secret lies in carefully filling-in the mould, so that every root and even the smallest fibre may meet the soil; and to secure this let the operator with his hand spread out the small roots, and fill-in the earth, nicely, around every one. Nine tenths of the deaths by transplanting arise from the hollows left among the roots of trees by a rapid and careless mode of shovelling the earth among the roots.

III. When the hole is two thirds filled, pour in a pail or two of water. This will settle the soil and fill up any little vacuities that may remain. Wait until the water has sunk away and then fill up the hole, pressing the earth moderately around the trees with the foot. The moist earth, being covered by the loose surface soil, will retain its humidity for a long time. Indeed, we rarely find it necessary to water again after planting in this way, and a little muck or litter placed around the tree, upon the newly-moved soil, will render it quite unnecessary. Frequent surface-watering is highly injurious, as it causes the top of the soil to bake so hard as to prevent the access of air and light, both of which, in a certain degree, are absolutely necessary.

IV. Avoid the prevalent error (so common and so fatal in this country) of planting your trees too deep. They should not be planted more than an inch deeper than they stood before. If they are likely to be thrown out by the frost the first winter, heap a little mound about the stem, to be removed again in the spring.

V. If your soil is positively bad, remove it from the holes, and substitute a cartload or two of good garden-mould. Do not forget that plants must have FOOD. Five times the common growth may be realized by preparing holes six feet in diameter and twice the usual depth, enriching and improving the soil by the plentiful addition of good compost. Young trees cannot be expected to thrive well in sod land. When a young orchard must be kept in grass, a circle should be kept dug around each tree. But cultivation of the land will cause the trees to advance more rapidly in five years than they will in ten, when it is allowed to remain in grass.

HARDY ROSES.

THE Rose is held in such universal favor, and admiration, that it is unnecessary to say any thing in its praise. It is such a favorite that it has won for itself the distinguished title of "FLORAL QUEEN." The great attention, which it has attracted both in Europe and this Country, has increased and multiplied the list of its varieties to an extent difficult to keep pace with. It adapts itself to the universal conditions of man, in all parts of the world. We find it surrounding the dwellings of the humble and the exalted; shedding its perfumes alike on the inmates of the Hut and the Palace, unconscious of distinction. It will flourish in any soil, or location, and its culture is simple and easy. An annual Fall pruning out of the old wood, and shortening those branches which have grown too long, is all that is necessary to ensure a good display of bloom, as a reward for this small trouble. Many are well adapted for Runners, and make a beautiful covering for Arbors, Porticos, Walls, etc.

The small collection here offered is deemed to be a good selection, to which, however, large additions will be made this Fall by importation.
